

What a difference 100 years makes

In 1907, over half the House were ordinary citizens who served their country and returned home within 3 terms–6 years. They spoke for other ordinary Americans and expected themselves to be governed by any laws they made.

In 2007, the largest segment of the House has served 10 or more terms - over 20 years. When they finally do leave the House, they stay in Washington and get rich advising big money how to most effectively corrupt our government.
